A ROMANCE.

A ROMANCE.

ALBANY, N. Y. May 11.—On Saturday the terribly mangled remains of a young man were found on the Hudson River railway track, a few miles west of Schenectady. A letter, found in one of the pockets, indicates that there was a romance in the life so suddenly and terribly terminated. The letter was as follows:

"HERMANN, Mo., March 24, 1891.

"Heemann, Mo., March 24, 1891.

"Mr. Samael Bright:

"Dear Friend—I got your letter in which you ask the hand of my daughter, all right. If you are the respectable young man that I take you for, I shall be glad to have you for a son-in-law. I don't care if you are poor. I have got enough money for all of us. All I want is a good fellow to manage my money and other affairs, as I am getting too old for that. I know A. Jager and Eli Rogers, and will come to your city soon and find out if you are all right, and if you are all right, I will let you come and marry my daughter soon.

"Your friend, A. Weedell."

Nothing was found on the body to indicate where the victim had lived, He was well dressed, and in the same pocket with the letter was a New Testament. It is thought that he fell from a west-bound freight train on his way to meet the object of his affections.

Heemann, Mo., May II.—No person by the name of A. Wendell is known here. Mr. Wendell is the person reported as the writer of a letter found in the pocket of the young man who was killed on the Hudson track near Schenectady, N. Y.

ENGLAND'S CENTENARIAN ADMIRAL

Still at the Head of the Navy, Although Over One Hundred Years Old. Sir Provo William Parry Wallis, senior admiral of the fleet and popularly known as the "father of the British navy," was 100 years old recently. His career has an uncommonly brilliant one. He is a Canadian by birth, being born at Halifax in 1791. He began his naval ex-perience in 1804, when he was appointed midshipman on the Cleopatra, and had his first taste of action six months later, when the Cleopatra succumbed to the superior power of the French frigate Ville de Milan. The Cleopatra was res-cued after hauling down the British flag, and the French frigate became the prize of the Leander, a fifty-gun ship, without a shot being fired.

Wallis was made a lieutenant in 1808, when he was but seventeen years old, and took part in the capture of Guadeloupe. Four years later he was appointed to the frigate Shannon, under Captain Broke, and he is the only survivor of the great naval duel which took place off Boston harbor on the 1st of June, 1813, between that vessel and the American frigate Chesapeake. This encounter was one of the most famous sea fights the world ever witnessed. and though between single ships, ranks second only to Trafalgar in British naval annals. For his share in the battle young Wallis received a letter of approbation from the admiralty and a sword from his captain. His promotion was very rapid afterward. In 1845 he was senior officer during the Syrian war; in 1851 he obtained full flag rank, and in 1857 he was appointed commander-in-chief on the southeast coast of America. His promotion to vice admiral followed in 1858, since which time he has not been to sea, but was placed upon

HON. M. H. FORD. at Saline, Mich., in 1840, and enlisted at the Brooklyn navy yard when fourteen years old as a boy seaman. He was assigned to a place on the frigate Sabine, which was sent to Fortress Mouroe.

The war ending he sailed in European waters upon the Colorado, the flagship of the Mediterranean fleet. He later entered the Naval academy at Annapolis, but sickness compelled him to leave the service. He was the youngest member of the G. A. R. in Michigan. He studied law after he left the navy and drifted into politics. He was elected to congress in 1886, and made a record as a member of the committee on immigration. He had also served in the legislature and was the author of "Ford's Legal Aualysis." He was mentioned as a Democratic gubernatorial candidate last

The Bibulous Jurymen of Oneensland. The jury system appears to have its de-fects in Queensiand as well as in other civilized countries. Recently a young man was on trial at Gympie, and when the jury retired to consider the evidence they saw the bailiff lock up the prisoner and go away for a drink. The "twelve good men and true" forthwith climbed out of a windaw and went to a saloon, where they were found when the judge sent to learn the reason of their delay in reaching a verdict. Result, a new trial for the accused.

Jockey Taral contradicts the assertion attributed to him that he is forming a "jockeys' trust" to raise the prices. He is not behind anything of the sort, but on the contrary believes the jockeys as a rule are well paid now under the present prices of twenty-five dollars for a winning and tea dollars for a losing mount.

J. Porter, the little colored boy who has made such a fine reputation as a successful light weight jockey in the west, is a son of John Porter, the humpbacked flarky, who himself rode races long before the war. He also rode during the seventies with some success, once or twice having the mount on the great Ten Brosck.
